

I'm Ane, a Basque product designer based in Brooklyn.

I design creative tools and digital products that turn complex ideas into experiences people can easily understand, learn, and enjoy. I'm especially drawn to products that help people build confidence, express themselves, and create without unnecessary friction.

Today I lead product design for creative software, shaping products such as Output Creator. As the Lead product designer on my squad, I work across product strategy, interaction design, design systems, and visual direction. I partner closely with product managers, engineers, and sound designers, while collaborating with product leadership and executive stakeholders — bringing teams together around a shared product vision and turning complex problems into experiences that feel simple and intuitive.
